A Snapshot of Newcomers: Final Report

Joseph H. Michalski, PhD, Usha George, PhD, School of Social Work, University of Toronto

Reviewed by Madeleine Wong

This report, funded by Citizenship and Immigration Canada, provided a descriptive summary of the challenges and problems encountered by newcomers who had been in Canada for five years or less, and were permanent residents or Canadian citizens. The objectives of the study were:

1) to seek information about how newcomers find out about settlement services;
2) to determine what settlement services are accessed;
3) to find out what sources of information other than formal settlement services newcomers access; and
4) to learn what newcomers think in retrospect would have facilitated their settlement in Canada.

A total of 248 newcomers were interviewed, of whom the majority (62%) were from Metropolitan Toronto. The remaining newcomers were interviewed in Ottawa, Windsor and Thunder Bay. Of those interviewed, 53.2 percent were males and 46.8 percent were females. The results of the survey and interviews show that a preponderance of newcomers demonstrated a heavy reliance on support networks of families and friends for access to social amenities—health, school, housing, as well as employment opportunities. Community and government agencies were relied on for access to language training, social assistance, legal aid, community services, and employment initiatives.

Most of the newcomers interviewed had completed the equivalent of high school and had a working knowledge of English. There are some geographical variations with respect to the problems encountered by newcomers in Canada, but these were not significant. In Toronto, the major obstacle newcomers faced was securing housing, followed by the lack of Canadian experience as a requisite for securing employment, poor job market, language barriers, and discrimination and prejudice. In Ottawa, the number one problem newcomers faced were language barriers, followed by problems in securing housing and employment in a poor job market. In Windsor, housing problems, discrimination and prejudice were the major obstacles while, in Thunder Bay, employment problems, discrimination and prejudice were the major obstacles encountered by newcomers. In general, the biggest challenge facing newcomers, upon arrival in Canada, was securing employment. The most common helpful hint for adjustment to Canada suggested by the newcomers was learning English or French, followed by advice on job seeking, job opportunities and availability.

This report, as the title aptly points out, gives only a snapshot of the experiences of newcomers in Canada and, as such, some significant aspects of newcomer integration are overlooked. Even though the study indicated that the participants interviewed came from different source countries, the results of the interviews homogenized these newcomers and their experiences of integration. However, characteristics such as age, class, culture, and migration experiences, among other characteristics, can differ among newcomers. Furthermore, although the authors maintain that it was not the intention of the study to capture the full range of behaviour, attitudes and emotions that might be indicative of different facets of integration, it should be noted that newcomers adapt to the host society in ways that reflect cultural values and norms, time of immigration, social and demographic characteristics, housing and labour market conditions, and the perceptions of the dominant society. In failing to elaborate on these characteristics and issues, this study lacks analytical significance.

A further limitation of this study is that the variables and results in the survey are not broken down by gender, thereby obscuring the different integration experiences of men and women newcomers. Finally, the fact that most of the participants in this study were recruited at Citizenship and Immigration Canada offices, where many were applying for Canadian citizenship, privileged a certain cohort (those who would be accessing Citizenship and Immigration) over other newcomers, for example, refugee claimants many of whose claims are still being processed. In addition, the fact that the interviews were conducted in English privileged a specific class of newcomers—the highly educated. Because of these limitations, I doubt whether the participants in the study constituted a representative sample of newcomers to Canada. I also have reservations about the claim that the information collected can possibly be an adequate representation of the experiences of newcomers.
Books

Asylum—A Moral Dilemma, by W. Gunther Plaut (co-published with Greenwood Publications 1995); $19.90
Legitimate and Illegitimate Discrimination: New Issues in Migration, Ed. by Howard Adelman (1995); $22.95
African Refugees: Development Aid and Repatriation, Edited by Howard Adelman and John Sorenson (1994) $39.90
Volume One: Context, Policy and Implementation; $24.95
Volume Two: Settlement and Impact; $24.95
Breaking Ground: The 1956 Hungarian Immigration to Canada, Edited by Robert H. Kayserlingk (1993); $12.95
Taking Refuge: Lao Buddhists in North America, by Penny Van Esterik (1992); $12.95
Refuge or Asylum: A Choice for Canada, Edited by Howard Adelman and C. Michael Lanphier (1991); $18.95
Refugee Policy: Canada and the United States, Edited by Howard Adelman (1991); $20.95
Soviet-Jewish Emigration and Resettlement in the 1990s, Edited by Tanya Basok and Robert J. Brym (1991); $15.95

Occasional Papers and Reports

Cambodian Refugees in Ontario: An Evaluation of Resettlement and Adaptation, by Janet McLellan (1993); $12.95
Somali Refugees in Toronto: A Profile, by Edward Opoku-Dapaah (1995); $12.95
The Genesis of a Domestic Refugee Regime: The Case of Hungary, Edited by Howard Adelman, Endre Sik and Géza Tessenyi (1994); $14.95

Back Issues of Refugee

The following is a list of general and thematic issues of Refugee—Canada’s periodical on refugees.

Single copy: Vol 12, 13 &14=$6.50; Vol 15–$10. 10 percent discount on 3–9 issues (copies); 20 percent discount on 10 issues (copies) or more. Special discounts are available for students and exclusively volunteer-run NGOs. P. O. accepted.

Please send your orders to:
Centre for Refugee Studies, York University
Suite 333, York Lanes, 4700 Keele Street
North York, Ontario, M3J 1P3, Canada
Fax: (416) 736-5837 * Email: refuge@yorku.ca
CALL FOR PAPERS

CONFLICT, POPULATION DISPLACEMENT, AND CONFLICT RESOLUTION

The Centre for Refugee Studies will soon publish a special issue of Refuge on “Conflict, Population Displacement, and Conflict Resolution.” The issue will address topics such as:

- Principles of conflict and conflict resolution emerging from displacements
- The role of national, regional and international organizations in conflict resolution
- Current conflicts, population displacements and conflict resolutions

Contributions with abstracts are invited. They must be received not later than June 22, 1997. Papers should be typed, double-spaced, and referenced in proper academic form. They should not exceed 16 pages or about 4000 words. Short papers of about 900 words are also welcomed. Word-processed submissions may be sent on disc or by email.

Les rédacteurs acceptent aussi des articles en français. Le style doit conformer aux normes exigés pour les articles rédigés en anglais.

For further detail, please contact:

Ogenga Otemu
Guest Editor, Refuge Special Issue
Centre for Refugee Studies, York University
Suite 322, York Lanes, 4700 Keele Street
North York, Ontario, M3J 1P3, Canada
Fax: (416) 736-5837 • Tel.: (416) 736-5843
Email: refuge@yorku.ca