Freedom of movement: If the members of a state are forced to flee, the legitimacy of that government is questionable. On the other hand, if members cannot or must leave, again the government is not democratically legitimate.

Immigration control: While limiting access and determining who may or may not become members of a sovereign state remains a legitimate prerogative of the state, the criteria, rules and processes for doing so must be compatible with its character as a democratic state.

Legitimate and Illegitimate Discrimination: New Issues in Migration, edited by Professor Howard Adelman, deals with the question of legitimacy with case studies from the Developing World, Europe, Australia, the United States, and Canada.

New Cargo: The Global Business of Trafficking in Women

The Centre for Refugee Studies will soon publish an issue of Refuge on “New Cargo: The Global Business of Trafficking in Women.”

This issue is intended to provide a space for analysis of the social and economic factors generating and sustaining the coercion and utilization of vulnerable women in the global business of sex trafficking—with a focus on refugee and immigrant women. Researchers and practitioners from academic circles and grassroots organizations working to counter trafficking in women are urged to submit papers which will illuminate refugee and immigrant women’s experiences with trafficking in a socioeconomic context, with particular attention to the relevance of United Nations human rights treaties, such as CEDAW, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women, and the Covenant on Social and Political Rights. Papers will include a section devoted to “strategies for international systemic change” involving local and international social, economic, legal and political systems.

Contributions with abstracts are invited. They must be received not later than September 30, 1998.

Papers should be typed, double-spaced, and referenced in proper academic form. They should not exceed 16 pages or about 4000 words. Short papers of about 900 words are also welcome. Word-processed submissions may be sent on disc or by email.

On accepte aussi des articles en français. Le style doit conformer aux normes exigés pour les articles rédigés en anglais.
